Day 1

Oslo, Norway is one of the most expensive cities in the world, but it's also one of the most beautiful. With its stunning fjord, charming old town, and world-class museums, there's plenty to see and do in Oslo. But if you're on a budget, it's important to know how to spend your money wisely.

Here's a guide to spending 48 hours in Oslo without breaking the bank:

Morning:

- Start your day with a free walking tour of the city. This is a great way to get your bearings and learn about Oslo's history and culture.

- After the tour, visit the Oslo Opera House. This stunning building is a work of art in itself, and it's free to explore.
- For lunch, head to the Mathallen food hall. This is a great place to sample some of Norway's traditional cuisine without spending a fortune.

Afternoon:

- After lunch, take a ferry to the Bygdøy peninsula. This is home to several museums, including the Viking Ship Museum and the Norwegian Folk Museum.
- If you're interested in history, the Viking Ship Museum is a must-see. Here you can see some of the best-preserved Viking ships in the world.
- The Norwegian Folk Museum is a great place to learn about Norwegian culture and traditions. Here you can see traditional buildings, costumes, and artifacts.

Evening:

- For dinner, head to the Grünerløkka district. This is a trendy neighborhood with plenty of affordable restaurants and bars.
- After dinner, take a walk along the Akerselva River. This is a beautiful area with plenty of parks and bridges.
- If you're feeling adventurous, you can take a night hike up to the Holmenkollen ski jump. This is a great way to get some exercise and see the city from a different perspective.

Day 2

On your second day in Oslo, you'll have time to explore some of the city's other attractions.

Morning:

- Start your day with a visit to the Vigeland Sculpture Park. This park is home to over 200 sculptures by Gustav Vigeland. It's a great place to relax and enjoy the outdoors.
- After the park, visit the Oslo Cathedral. This is one of the most important churches in Norway, and it's free to enter.
- For lunch, head to the Torggata district. This is a great place to find cheap and cheerful restaurants.

Afternoon:

- After lunch, take a boat trip to the Oslofjord. This is a great way to see the city from a different perspective.
- If you're interested in art, visit the National Gallery of Norway. Here you can see some of the best Norwegian and international art.
- If you're looking for something to do with the kids, visit the Oslo Reptile Park. This is a great place to see snakes, lizards, and other reptiles.

Evening:

- For dinner, head to the Aker Brygge district. This is a trendy neighborhood with plenty of restaurants and bars.
- After dinner, take a walk along the Oslofjord. This is a beautiful area with plenty of parks and bridges.

- If you're feeling adventurous, you can take a night hike up to the Ekeberg restaurant. This is a great way to get some exercise and see the city from a different perspective.

Tips for Saving Money in Oslo

Oslo Pass: The Oslo Pass is a great way to save money on transportation and attractions. The pass gives you unlimited access to public transportation, as well as free admission to many museums and attractions.

Free walking tours: There are several free walking tours available in Oslo. These tours are a great way to learn about the city's history and culture.

Cheap eats: There are plenty of affordable restaurants in Oslo. Try to avoid touristy areas and eat at local restaurants instead.

Free activities: There are plenty of free things to do in Oslo, such as visiting parks, walking along the fjord, and taking advantage of the city's many free museums and events.

Oslo is an expensive city, but it's possible to visit without breaking the bank. By following these tips, you can save money on transportation, attractions, and food. With a little planning, you can easily spend 48 hours in Oslo without spending a fortune.
