Early Life and Conversion

Lesley Crewe was born in 1714 to a wealthy family in County Durham, England. Her early life was marked by privilege and comfort, but she was also deeply affected by the poverty and suffering she witnessed around her. In her teenage years, she experienced a profound religious conversion, and she began to devote her life to serving the poor and marginalized.

Crewe's decision to follow Christ was not met with approval from her family and community. Her father disowned her, and she was ostracized by much of society. Undeterred, she continued to preach the gospel and care for the sick and needy.

Persecution and Imprisonment

As Crewe's ministry grew, so did the opposition she faced. She was accused of heresy, witchcraft, and sedition. In 1758, she was arrested and imprisoned in York Castle. During her imprisonment, she was subjected to torture and harsh treatment, but she refused to renounce her faith.

After three years in prison, Crewe was released, but she continued to face persecution and harassment. She was often beaten and threatened, but she remained steadfast in her commitment to serving others.
