The CWA Historical Dagger Award is awarded annually to the best crime novel set in a historical period. The award is judged by a panel of experts in the field of historical crime fiction, and the winner is announced at the CWA's annual Dagger Awards ceremony.

Pursglove's novel, "The Last Banquet," is set in 18th-century London and follows the story of a young woman who is accused of murdering her husband.

"The Last Banquet" is Pursglove's second novel, and it has already received critical acclaim. The Guardian called it "a gripping and atmospheric thriller that brings 18th-century London to life." The Daily Mail said that it was "a must-read for fans of historical crime fiction."

Pursglove is a former journalist and editor, and he has written extensively about crime and history. He is the author of several non-fiction books, including "A History of Crime in 100 Objects" and "The Devil's Highway: A True Story of Crime and Punishment in the Wild West."

The CWA Historical Dagger Award is one of the most prestigious awards in the field of crime fiction, and Pursglove is honored to be longlisted for it.

"I'm thrilled that 'The Last Banquet' has been longlisted for the CWA Historical Dagger Award," said Pursglove. "It's a great honor to be recognized by such a prestigious panel of judges."

The winner of the CWA Historical Dagger Award will be announced at the CWA's annual Dagger Awards ceremony on July 12, 2024.
