Scales are sets of notes that progress from low to high or high to low. The most common scale is the major scale, which consists of seven notes: C,

D, E, F, G, A, and B.

Rhythm is the pattern of beats and accents in music. It creates a sense of movement and time.

Beats are the basic units of rhythm. They are typically played at regular intervals.

Accents are stronger beats that emphasize certain parts of the rhythm.

Harmony is the combination of two or more notes played simultaneously. It can create a variety of effects, such as consonance (pleasant-sounding) and dissonance (unpleasant-sounding).

Chords are sets of notes that are played together. They are the basic building blocks of harmony.

Form is the overall structure of a piece of music. It includes elements such as sections, phrases, and cadences.

Sections are the largest units of form. They are typically separated by pauses or changes in tempo.

Phrases are smaller units of form. They are typically made up of a few measures of music.

Cadences are short musical passages that create a sense of closure. They are often used at the end of sections or phrases.
