Narrator: In the beginning, there were five of us. There was Sarah, the leader of the group; John, the funny one; Mary, the shy one; and Tom and Lucy, the couple. We were all from different backgrounds, but we had one thing in common: we were all looking for friendship.

The friends continue to talk around the campfire, sharing their stories and dreams. It is clear that they are all close friends, and they have a strong bond.

Sarah: I'm so glad we have each other. I don't know what I would do without you guys.

John: Me neither. You guys are my family.

Mary: I'm so lucky to have found you all.

Tom: We're all lucky to have each other.

Lucy: I wouldn't trade you guys for the world.

The episode ends with the friends laughing and singing around the campfire. They are all happy to have found each other, and they know that their friendship will last a lifetime.

The friends talk about Sarah's decision, and they try to convince her to stay. However, Sarah is determined to take the job, and she knows that it is the best opportunity for her career.

Sarah: I'm so sorry guys, but I'm going to take the job. It's a great opportunity for me, and I can't pass it up.

John: We're going to miss you so much.

Mary: I can't believe you're leaving.

Tom: It's not going to be the same without you.

Lucy: We'll never forget you.

Sarah leaves the group, and the friends are all heartbroken. They miss her dearly, and they don't know how they're going to go on without her.
